

Contents

INTRODUCTION – Thesis, methods, and results	13
1 THESIS, METHODS, AND RESULTS	19
1.1 Definition of key terms: punk, alchemy of punk, transmutation, subversion, and poetry. Terminology and epistemological contextualization of punk.	21
1.2 Methods, materials, and sources: alchemy as a metaphor and a method. Toward an alchemical genealogy of punk. An experimental, art-history-informed data collage and open archive including poems, songs, films, conversation pieces, references, documents, and music found and realized during my groundwork, experimentation, and encounters with artists.	35
1.3 Performative research and performing knowledge: about the necessity of visualization and associative speculation in formulating and deconstructing theories and questioning realities—the punk opera.	39
1.4 Scope: timeline 1976–1968–1916–1461. Historical figures of poets, thieves, and assassins. Proto-punk. Birth and death of punk—the contemporary context of punk’s emergence and decline.	45
2 PUNK POETICS, MOTIFS, AND IMAGERY	73
2.1 Death: The resurgence of medieval death and decay motifs in punk: Apocalypse, ars moriendi , memento mori , and danse macabre . The blank generation and their longing for death. The elegy.	75
2.2 Love: “Find what you love and let it kill you.” The permeation of love and death, sex, drugs, AIDS, infatuation, crime, and suicide. From murder ballads, broadside ballads, chansons des trouvères , songs of the minnesingers , and madrigals to punk songs.	95

2.3	Travesty: buffoonery, play, and joke. Masculin Féminin , alchemical androgynies and the crucial meaning of travesty and changing identities in punk. Travesty as a strategy of exposure and rebellion. Identities of resistance. Jackie Curtis, Candy Darling, Holly Woodlawn, Jayne County, Divine, Zazie de Paris, and Romy Haag.	129
2.4	Poetry: fear and loathing, insolence and innocence, and purity and cynicism. The manifold legacy of poètes maudits : François Villon, Dante Alighieri, Charles Baudelaire, Arthur Rimbaud, Comte de Lautréamont, William Blake, Walt Whitman, Antonin Artaud, Joséphin Péladan, Ezra Pound, and others. Music and poetry, toward a dirty sublimation.	148
3	THE GENEALOGY AND SUBVERSIVE REINVENTION OF PUNK	183
3.1	Performativity and theatricality of punk: historical outline of performative and theatrical strategies reaching back to the traditions of ancient Dionysia, medieval mystery plays, ballads, pastorals, folk songs, ditties, cabarets, chansons, beggar’s operas, and Artaud’s Theatre of Cruelty, and their echoes in punk.	185
3.2	Aesthetics of cacophony: impromptu, noise, scream, howl, and explosion. The intricate relationship between music, avant-garde, and counterculture. Pour en finir avec le jugement de Dieu by Antonin Artaud (1947), Tontänze by Valeska Gert (1920s), and die Ursonate by Kurt Schwitters (1932).	207
3.3	Finit hic deo: Lucifer’s non serviam and the Sex Pistols’ “I am an antichrist.” Punk as a rebirth of medieval satanism, iconoclasm, and heresy.	227
	CONCLUSION and impact on my own work · Heresy and sacrilege · Dionysian Art · Readings of Bataille · The Punk Opera	241
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	249